

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A display device which comprises charged particles located on a substrate and a device of moving the charged particles parallel to the 5 substrate, and whose display states to be recognized visually from above the substrate are determined by positions of the charged particles within the substrate, wherein the substrate contains a fluorescent material or a luminous material.